IN MEMORIAM
In loving remembrance of our dear son and brother, Ernest D. Barber, who passed away July 3rd, 1921, 29 years ago.
We loved him, yes we loved him. But angels loved him more. And they have sweetly called him home.
To yonder shining shore.
The Golden Gates were open
A gentle voice said, "Come."
And with farewells unspoken
He calmly entered home.
Sadly missed by his parents, brother and sister.
Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Barber and family.

THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

(Unanimously Adopted in Congress, July 4, 1776, at Philadelphia)

WHEN, IN THE COURSE of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitles them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident: That all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable Rights; that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. That, to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; That, whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundations on such principles, and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and, accordingly, all experience hath shewn; that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object, evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security. Such has been the patient sufferance of these Colonies, and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former Systems of Government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute Tyranny over these states. To prove this, let Facts be submitted to a candid world.

HE HAS REFUSED his assent to Laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

He has forbidden his Governors to pass Laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his Assent should be obtained; and, when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.

He has refused to pass other Laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of Representation in the Legislature—a right inestimable to them, and formidable to tyrants only.

He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable and distant from the depository of their public Records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures.

He has dissolved Representative Houses repeatedly, for opposing with manly firmness his invasions on the rights of the people.

He has refused for a long time, after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the Legislative powers, incapable of Annihilation, have returned to the People at large for their exercise; the State remaining, in the meantime, exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without, and convulsions within.

He has endeavored to prevent the population of these States for that purpose obstructing the Laws of Naturalization of Foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migration hither, and raising the conditions of new Appropriations of Lands.

He has obstructed the Administration of Justice, by refusing his Assent to laws for establishing Judiciary Powers.

He has made Judges dependent on his Will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries.

He has erected a multitude of New Offices, and sent hither swarms of Officers to harass our people, and eat out their substance.

He has kept among us, in times of peace, Standing Armies without the Consent of our Legislature.

He has affected to render the Military independent of, and superior to, the Civil power.

He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws, giving his Assent to their Acts of pretended Legislation:

FOR QUARTERING large bodies of armed troops among us:
For protecting them, by a mock Trial, from punishment for any Murders which they should commit on the Inhabitants of these States:

For cutting off our Trade with all parts of the world:

For imposing Taxes on us without our Consent:

For depriving us, in many cases, of the benefits of Trial by jury:

For transporting us beyond Seas, to be tried for pretended offenses:

For abolishing the free System of English Laws in a neighboring Province, establishing therein an Arbitrary government, and enlarging its Boundaries, so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these Colonies:

For taking away our Charters, abolishing our most valuable Laws, and altering, fundamentally, the Forms of our Governments:

For suspending our own Legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with the power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

He has abdicated Government here, by declaring us out of his Protection and waging War against us.

He has plundered our seas, ravaged our Coasts, burnt our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people.

He is at this time transporting large Armies of foreign Mercenaries to complete the works of death, desolation and tyranny, already begun with circumstances of Cruelty and perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the Head of a civilized nation.

He has constrained our fellow-Citizens, taken captive on the high Seas, to bear Arms against their Country, to become the executioners of their friends and Brethren, or to fall themselves by their Hands.

He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and he endeavored to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers, the merciless Indian Savages, whose known rule of warfare is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes, and conditions.

IN EVERY STAGE of these Oppressions We have Petitioned for Redress in the most humble terms: Our repeated Petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A Prince, whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a Tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people.

Nor have we been wanting in attentions to our British brethren. We have warned them from time to time of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the ties of our common kindred to disavow these usurpations, which inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They, too, have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity, which denounces our Separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind—Enemies in War, in Peace, Friends.

WE, THEREFORE, the Representatives of the United States of America, in General Congress Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the Name and by authority of the good People of these Colonies, solemnly publish and declare, That these United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be, free and Independent States; that they are Absolved from all Allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved; and that as Free and Independent States, they have full Power to levy War, conclude Peace, contract Alliances, establish Commerce, and do all other Acts and Things which Independent States may of right do. And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes, and our sacred Honor.

THE AMERICAN WAY

So Obvious

Interesting Events In Grayling 23 Years Ago

INTERESTING ITEMS OF NEWS GATHERED FROM THE FILES OF THE AVALANCHE OF 23 YEARS AGO

July 7, 1927.

While there wasn't as large a crowd in Grayling to spend the Fourth as there was last year still those who were here enjoyed a day of real pleasure. The streets and business places were hung with flags and bunting, giving the town a patriotic air.

By the time of the parade a goodly crowd was assembled. The American and Legion flags fronted the parade marching ahead of the Grayling band. The latter was made up of nineteen pieces and headed by Harold MacNeven. Next in line were the floats. First prize went to the Grayling Box Co., whose float consisted of a miniature dwelling house before which was a pretty lawn with trees and shrubbery. Olaf Sorenson and Sons presented the handsome Arctic Ice Cream auto that had been about the streets for a couple of days with the addition of flags, bunting, etc., for which they won second prize. Third prize went to the Grayling Floral Co., for a handsome float of flowers.

Schram's Ramblers orchestra mounted on a large truck furnished inspiring music throughout the lines of march. Composing the orchestra are Leo Schram, John Brewster, Bill Link and Finley and Vernon Klingensmith.

Another float was named "The Spirit of Portage Lake." It was a handsome auto presented by James Milne, owner of several cottages at Lake Margrethe. It was bedecked in flowers and streamers. Riding in front of the hood were little Nancilee Noyes of Detroit and Mrs. James Robertson of Saginaw. In the car were Miss Gladys Wheeler, Detroit, niece of Miss Ingley, Miss Hazel Gregg, Bay City, Miss Eleanor Robinson, Saginaw, and Miss Clarice Welch, Frederic. They won the prize for being the best decorated auto.

Theodore Jr., and LeRoy Leslie, children of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Leslie of Beaver Creek made a good hit when they appeared dressed as an old couple and were drawing a miniature covered wagon. They won the prize for being the most comical couple. The prize for the most comical vehicle was won by W. Broadbent, which was a farm wagon with a plow in it, the driver and the horse wearing straw hats.

Niels Nelson dressed like Methusalem was pushing a baby buggy, his flowing locks, tight trousers and bent form making quite a hit. He won the prize for being the most comical dressed person.

Billy McLeod dressed in coveralls appeared in the parade riding his Shetland pony. The colored couple in the line of march were Bunny Montour and Marie Brown. Judges for the parade were members of the Napoleon Trio and Mr. Langer.

In the afternoon sports event the following were winners: Boys 100 yard dash: George Cornell, 1st; Leo Lovely, 2nd; Stephen Jorgenson and Gregg Crandall tied for third.

Boys race: Will Peters, 1st; Kinsman Lamb, 2nd, and Alex Smith, 3rd.

Girls race: Bertha Denewit, 1st; Corrine Sheldon, 2nd; Carmine Sheldon and Elizabeth Kline, tied for third.

Sack race: Ambrose Kline, 1st; Frances McKeown, 2nd, and Farrell Gorman, 3rd.

Bicycle race: Amos Hoesli, 1st; Arthur Pankow, 2nd.

Pie eating contest: Ernest Bissonette, 1st; Myrton Burrows, 2nd; Farrell Gorman, 3rd.

Grayling and Johannesburg played baseball during the afternoon. The game ending 23 to 11 in favor of Grayling with batteries being Grayling—Laurent and Johnson; Johannesburg—Pearsall, Weaver, Sorenson, Powell and Welch.

A display of fireworks in the evening was one of the nicest ever seen here.

Management of the celebration was in the hands of the Grayling Post American Legion from posting the bills to cleaning the streets next day and they were on the job and saw to it nothing was left undone. Special mention is due Post Commander Alfred Hanson, Wilfred Laurent, Alvin LaChappelle, Harry Hemmingson and Roy Milnes for their work in the affair.

Word has been received of the birth of a son to Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Trudeau of Ithaca, who will be called Anthony James. Mrs. Trudeau was formerly Miss Edna Wingard.

First of the Fine Cars in Value

The Car that puts your Best Foot forward!

WE think you'll agree that the whole story of an automobile isn't told in its power, its room, its styling, even in its ride.

There is the all-important point about what a car does to you—and that's where ROADMASTER really shines.

For you can't slip into this bonny beauty's broad seats without feeling like somebody pretty special.

When you take its neat wheel in your hand—when you cut loose, with a toe-touch, the rich baritone of its big Fireball straight-eight power plant—when you feel the smooth surge of its Dynaflo-cushioned take-off—

Man, then you know you've got a real automobile!

And don't overlook this:

That graceful sweep of chrome along the fender—found on no other car made today—is a mighty eye-catching note of distinction.

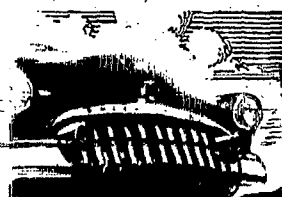

Those four Ventiports, too, cause many a head to turn—they mark you unmistakably as the owner of the biggest and best Buick built—a car as fine and rich as any man has need for.

There are a lot of good, solid, dollars-and-cents reasons for making ROADMASTER your choice over any other car:

Its size. The commanding performance of its 152-hp Fireball valve-in-head straight-eight engine. Dynaflo Drive standard. A ride that's quite matchless in its gentle softness. Distinguished styling from bold, protective front end to gleaming "double bubble" taillight.

But if you're ready for a car that's more than just an automobile—if you want one that puts your best foot forward in any company—that's the real reason for seeing your Buick dealer quickly—to talk turkey about a ROADMASTER.

FOUR-WAY FOREFRONT

This rugged front end (1) sets the style, (2) saves on repair costs—vertical bars are individually replaceable, (3) avoids "locking horns," (4) makes parking and garaging easier.

Seek Damage For Deer Allegedly Killed In County

Trial of a suit to collect damages for 50-odd deer allegedly killed on a southern Crawford County farm will be heard in Grayling circuit court July 12.

A test case, the civil action will be the conservation department's first effort to get a legal ruling whether it can collect damages for the killing of deer, and to have a court place a cash value on the animals.

Defendants are Dr. Bernard M. Godfrey of Traverse City and Bernard Maurer who lives on the farm.

Maurer was acquitted on a criminal charge of killing deer by a jury in the Grayling circuit court last April on his appeal from a prior conviction.

Dr. Godfrey, against whom no criminal charge was brought, testified during Maurer's circuit court trial that he (Godfrey) had shot the deer on a permit issued by the department. Such permits are issued on proper showing of farmers and orchardists that deer are damaging crops.

Deer killed under such permits must be turned over to the department which gives the meat to state institutions.

In this instance, the department claims that none of the 50-odd carcasses were turned over to proper authorities. Antlers and other evidence that 50-odd deer had been shot were found in out-buildings on the farm when officers armed with a search warrant visited the place.

Nicholas V. Olds, assistant attorney general assigned to the conservation department, says the civil action provides an opportunity for the placing of a cash value on deer.

Ground Water Level Shows Marked Drop

Ground water levels in the north-central part of the lower peninsula fell sharply between mid-May and mid-June, according to the conservation department's geological survey division. Rain-fall deficiency and demands of growing vegetation on the water supply are principal reasons.

Average ground water stage in Au Sable, Muskegon and Manistee drainage basins is .13 foot higher than the record June low set in 1949; 2.20 feet lower than the record June high set in 1943.

Lampreys Will Not Harm Human Beings

Lampreys, the primitive oil-like creatures which are bringing much destruction to fish life in the Great Lakes, are completely harmless to human swimmers.

This is the conclusion reached by Dr. Charles W. Creaser, chairman of the biology department at Wayne University, after years of study of the creatures' habits.

Michigan fishermen regard the lamprey as a menacing marauder because he gets his food by burying his sucker-like mouth in the flesh of trout, whitefish and other edible fishes and riding with them through the water as he feeds. His destructive work has made inroads upon the Great Lakes' fish crop.

"But he has never been known to so much as break human skin with his teeth," despite the fact that he occasionally attaches himself to swimmers," Dr. Creaser says.

Apparently the warmth of the human flesh, which contrasts to the cold flesh of his marine victims, inhibits the lamprey from attempting to use man as food. He just "goes for a ride," as he frequently does on motor-boats, racing shells, and row boats, the biologist says.

"He drops off the second the swimmer is out of the water, and only a slight mouth print can be found to show that he was present. He is nowhere near as inconvenient as a leech."

Dr. Creaser will continue his research on the lamprey during the current summer while he is a member of the staff of the University of Michigan biological camp near Cheboygan. He has spent many previous summers there in the work.

The sea lamprey has become an increasingly serious problem ever since his invasion of Lake Ontario a bare quarter-century ago. In twenty-five years he has multiplied with such rapidity that today he infests all the Great Lakes and many of the adjoining bodies of water, destroying valuable food fish wherever he goes.

It was the Wayne University biologist who in 1947 first reported the migration of the creature into the region of Lake Superior.

Research about the life history and breeding habits of the sea lamprey is an important preliminary to a scientific method of controlling or eradicating him.

Take Photos Here For Television

Robert Blair, Cleveland photographer and Andy Munch of the Eastern Michigan Tourist Association were in Grayling last Thursday, the former to take a series of pictures of the Grayling Fish Hatchery. The pictures are to be shown on the Camel Caravan television program of the National Broadcasting Company, a nationwide hook-up.

Pictures of the hatchery will be one of 60 feature pictures taken in North Eastern Michigan. Mr. Blair took the pictures of the Au Sable canoe race that were shown several years ago.

Mr. Blair and Mr. Munch have headquarters at Oscego Lake and

Crash Injured Plane Pilot Released From Hospital

Merl Moultrup of Beaver Falls, Pennsylvania, who was seriously injured in the crash of his piston-engine plane near Roscommon on June 9 was released from Grayling Mercy Hospital last Thursday and began his trip home.

Moultrup was high in his praise of the fine care he was given by the local doctors and the hospital. He added that Grayling people visiting their friends and relatives at the hospital had taken a personal interest in him and he really liked Grayling and hoped to make a trip back here sometime. He quickly stated though it would be under happier conditions.

The veteran pilot who saw service in World War I in the Air Force and spent World War II test piloting military aircraft and modifying existing planes for the huge Douglas Aircraft Company, lifted the nose of his plane from the Beaver River at Beaver Falls, Pennsylvania at 9 A. M. on the morning of June 9 bound for Houghton Lake, where he expected to spend the night and then push on to Houghton, Michigan and from there to Ely, Minnesota, where he operated a seaplane base, and flew missions for the United States Forest Service. Last year he had done a considerable amount of prospecting in western Ontario and Minnesota for uranium. This work was accomplished not only by flying back into the deep bush country, but also by canoe, a fact which Moultrup advanced as one reason he came out of his difficult crash in as good shape as he did.

Moultrup usually crosses Michigan about May 1 on his flight to the north country, but, due to the late spring and ice still forming in the lakes, he postponed the trip a month. Shortly before the start of his trip, he installed a new, more powerful engine in his seaplane. This was the second flight with the engine and gas consumption ran ahead of what he planned on. Due to a faulty gas gauge, Moultrup's motor unexpectedly conked out about 10 minutes out from Houghton Lake. Searching for a spot to set down, he finally selected Mud Lake near Roscommon and pancaked the ship into the tops of some trees near the edge of the swamp.

"About four hours later, I came around to consciousness and found myself trapped in the cabin of the ship," Moultrup said. "After about another hour of maneuvering around, I was able to break out a window and to the ground outside which was about 4 feet under the plane," he continued.

There started a two night and day vigil for the seriously injured pilot. He discovered upon getting to the ground that he couldn't travel due to his injuries. Observing deer moving down to the water to drink, his out of doors training came handy as he rightly concluded that they moved down from higher ground. The Pennsylvania flyer crawled and wormed his way to the higher ground and then followed a sleepless night which he related as a nightmare of fighting off hosts of swarming mosquitoes and suffering from a dislocated shoulder, several skull fractures, several broken ribs, a sprained ankle, a sprained wrist and arm, and a severely injured pelvic bone as well as multiple contusions, bruises and cuts over his face and body. Came Saturday morning and Moultrup still was too weak and sick to move. Here was where his northland canoe trips stood him in stead. He related that he didn't lose his head and become frightened, which would have happened to most of us, but, quietly planned during the day Saturday how he would get out to highway M-55, which he knew was to the south of him from air observations before he landed. Another sleepless and horror-filled night followed with thirst another big problem now as Moultrup had not had a drink of water since Friday. Added to this again were the hordes upon hordes of buzzing, biting mosquitoes and the terrific pain of his injuries.

Before the break of dawn Sunday morning, the injured airman had found he could stagger, stumble and crawl from 10 to 15 feet before he had to rest. This went on for several hours before he finally reached the highway, where he promptly collapsed beside the road shoulder. Here with safety and medical attention in sight, passed some of the worst moments of the entire episode. Moultrup tried to stop several motorists—and they passed him by. Finally a Houghton Lake man, who Moultrup forgot in the excitement to identify, stopped.

"I really had quite a time getting him to pick me up," the flyer said. "It being a Sunday morning the motorist was convinced that I was just a morning-after-the-night before character. Finally I persuaded him that I had been injured in a plane crash and he took me to a Houghton Lake hotel, where I stayed on my way home last fall."

Due to his facial injuries from the crash and the swelling from hundreds of insect bites, the hotel operators did not recognize him right away. They, however, called a physician and after an examination, an ambulance was called and Moultrup was brought to Mercy Hospital.

Moultrup and his wife, who was flown here from Ely, Minnesota, when she heard of the crash by famed bush pilot, Hildig Anderson, left on the midnight train for Beaver Falls, Pennsylvania for at least a month's recuperation period. His plans after that are still not definite. Moultrup began his flying career in 1916 when he first soloed. Two years of flying in World War I followed. His entire life has been spent in aviation and he has much better than 15,000 hours to his credit. This was his first crash—and he said, his last. He first went to Ely, Minnesota in 1939 to fly for the U. S. Forest Service, liking the country he returned to open his own seaplane base. Then followed the flames of war in Europe and Asia and Moultrup like an old firehorse wanted back into the Air Force. It was decided that he could much better serve his country test flying military planes. His position with the Douglas Aircraft Company followed while he flew planes at the big Douglas plant at Santa Monica, California. Douglas then transferred him to Tulsa, Oklahoma, where he was flight operations chief and chief test pilot for the Douglas Modification Center. Here in the two years that Moultrup was on the job, 2,800 four-motored bombers were modified, 75 millimeter cannons were installed in the B-25 Mitchell bombers, radar installations were made and tested, pickup devices added to C-47s in order that they might tow gliders. Other planes modified at the field were B-17s, B-24s, A-26s, P-61 Black Widows and P-71 night fighters.

Moultrup's crashed plane was dismantled and usable parts and the motor shipped back to Beaver Falls. This work was done by Max Partridge, a friend of four years' standing. He was high in his praise of the Michigan State Police, who back-tracked Moultrup's trail 3½ to 4 miles to his wrecked plane and saved valuable equipment including Geiger counters. He added that nothing was disturbed from the time he left the plane and gave the State Police all of the credit.

As the end of the pilot's story came near and the interview drew near to a close, Moultrup again asked, "Be sure to give a lot of credit to your Grayling doctors, the nurses and staff of this hospital. They treated me royally and I really appreciate it. When you're hurt or sick and far from home, the kind of fine treatment and consideration I received here is doubly valued."

Argue For Doe, Fawn Shooting

Arguments for regulated shooting of does and fawns during special seasons in areas of Michigan where the winter food supply of deer is exhausted or menaced are contained in a new conservation department publication.

The story of Michigan's deer herd down the years is told in the 56-page pamphlet now being distributed by the department's game division.

Written by I. H. Bartlett, the department's deer authority, the pamphlet, "Michigan Deer," is a revision of his earlier text, "Whitetails," published in 1938.

Michigan's deer herd "has now outgrown its winter food supply in 4,000 square miles of northern lower peninsula range," Bartlett writes. "Hundreds of square miles of winter range are being ruined by overpopulation and thousands of deer are being lost and wasted annually through starvation. Such a condition cannot continue indefinitely. Either the herd must be cut down to fit its natural food supply, or it will go down naturally. If we wait for nature to act, the result will be browsed-out deer ranges and small deer herds in the future."

Pointing out that "the income to Michigan people, directly or indirectly, because of the deer herd runs into millions of dollars annually," Bartlett declares, "the coming few years are tremendously important," and that "the range—the subsistence of the deer—must be conserved by proper herd management, beginning now, if we are to be assured of satisfactory deer numbers in the future."

NEW GENERAL PURPOSE ROOMS SERVE AS COMMUNITY CENTERS

The modern "new look" school means a break for parents too. Mindful of community social and civic needs, architects are equipping many new schools in Crawford County with a room that appears magically from unobtrusive platforms against the side walls.

Then at night, hinged basketball backboards are jack-knifed out of sight and the room is readied for its evening role as a community social or cultural center.

Glass block is used to advantage in these multi-purpose rooms—as well as in classrooms. Large panels on the rear and side walls introduce ample daylight for all activities.

They also result in substantial savings in maintenance. Set in mortar, panels of glass block seldom require attention, never need painting and are easy to clean. They can withstand hail, snow, sleet, and even fire.

Thus, eliminating the need for wire guards and other expensive protective devices.

By Richard E. Williams

JUD HAD BEEN the redheaded girl in Mr. Jones' outfit office every day for a week.

He himself was a copy man, and if she were after the same job that he wanted it would complicate things.

It would cut his chances of success in half, and he would be rather embarrassed because—well, because he thought she was an awfully pretty girl and he liked the way she held her chin high and tried to appear brave.

On Monday of the second week, the redheaded girl dropped her handbag. Its contents spilled all over the place. Jud helped pick them up—lipstick, a bunch of keys, a pawn ticket. Jud's lips tightened when he saw that. Just as he thought—she had to pawn something in order to live.

Of course the handbag episode gave him the liberty of talking with her. Without half-trying, he got her story. It was just as he figured. A sad tale of deprivation and lost hope. If only she could see Mr. Jones. She knew he needed a stenographer and she really was awfully good.

A determined light came into Jud's eyes.

Ignoring the protestations of the switchboard girl, he burst through the railed-in space, crossed it in two bounds and threw open the door to Mr. Jones' office.

Mr. Jones was sitting at his desk, smoking a cigar. He looked up with a startled expression when Jud entered. He had heavy frowns and a shock of grey hair and belligerent, bushy eyebrows.

The cigar fell from his mouth. He stood up. Before Jud could utter a word, he barked: "Your name Jud Essex?"

"Yes, sir," said Jud, taken aback.

"I'll be damned!" exclaimed Mr. Jones. "Did she tell you who she was?"

"Did she tell me who she was?" Jud asked, beginning to think he was mistaken for some one else.

"My daughter! That redheaded girl in the outfit office?"

It was Jud's turn to drop a cigar. He had had one. "Your daughter? That—the girl who wants a job as a stenographer?"

Mr. Jones came round his desk. He was short, but round. He glared up at Jud. "You're hired," he said. "I lost a bet, so you're hired. But you're hired. Got that?"

"Glad up! Do you want the job, or don't you?"

Mr. Jones stalked out of the office. A man came in another door.

"Of course, I'm nervous. I made a bet with Dad that I'd marry you."

and told Jud to follow him. "Kato always wins," the man said. "Here's your desk. Kato wants you to go to lunch with her this noon."

JUD SAT DOWN, speechless. "Do you mean—I am one of several who have been hired in this fashion?"

Jud passed a hand through his hair. The man left. Jud sat down at his desk. He tried to straighten things out in his mind, and was beginning to get places, when Kato entered.

At lunch Kato said: "Would you like to marry me?"

"Sure," said Jud, grinning weakly.

"All right then. Right after work. I'll be waiting."

She was—

He wondered what was next. He found out. She took him to a minister's. She produced a license. Jud tried to grin. He gulped and stared at her.

"Good lord! You're not serious about this?"

Jud suddenly no longer had the feeling that he liked all this. "Now listen," he said. "I can't marry you. In the first place I don't love you. In the second I think you and your old man are crazy. And in the next place, I'm already married and have three kids!"

Mr. Jones called Jud on the phone the next morning. "Listen, you're still working for me? If you want the job, I won a bet from Kato, and it's cured her of her screwy notions. Come on down. Your salary's doubled."

'Wolverine State' Is a Monocler, Says Way

Wayne University coeds, Betty Schumacher (left) of Plymouth, and Ruth Swatek, of Grand Haven, admire the wolverines at the Detroit Zoological Park. The spectators are separated from the two curious animals, not by obscuring bars, but by a protecting moat, just beyond the grizzly bank.

If Michigan is the "Wolverine State", someone had better tell the wolverines.

According to Dr. Charles W. Creaser, chairman of the Wayne University biology department, there are no wolverines living wild in Michigan, and there is even some question as to whether a wolverine ever was a voluntary resident of the state.

Shunning the state which gave them fame, the wolverines chose for their home the rough, barren country further north; though their cousins of the weasel family, the martens, found Michigan's pine forests to their liking. It is the Arctic and sub-Arctic regions of Canada, Scandinavia, and Russia, and the Black Forest of Germany, which wolverines prefer.

European naturalists refer to the namesake of our state as "gluttons", and well they may. With appetites never satisfied, wolverines dig animals from the earth to devour them, greedily eat the kill of other creatures as vultures do, steal bait from snares, and devour trapped animals.

A full-grown wolverine, about the size of a small Airedale, has coarse, dark fur, with occasional yellowish-white chest spots. Its color and bushy tail give the wolverine an attractive appearance, which belies its personality. Actually the beast is snarling and ill-tempered, with a nasty disposition.

Few wolverines have been captured alive and kept under observation. Dr. Creaser says. One of the few live exhibits of the animals in the Midwest is to be found at the Detroit Zoological Gardens, often visited by Wayne biological students.

Uncle Sam's Installment Buying Easy For All But The Taxpayer

Uncle Sam goes in for installment buying in a big way. Only he calls it "contract authorization." It means nothing down on billions when the bill comes.

Some figures on this comparatively recent development in Federal finance were brought out today in a special study ordered by State, Chambers of Commerce.

For instance, the 1951 Federal Budget which Congress is now considering would grant various Federal agencies authority to contract for construction, and other jobs that will require expenditures in future years. These will not cost anything in cash outlay right now but they will involve spending at least $3,363,000,000 before they are finished.

Because these grants of contract authority do not show up right away as spending items in the budget, the groups constantly pressuring Congress for public spending pounce upon them as a painless way of putting over new spending projects. Congress itself has frequently replaced part or all of a requested cash appropriation with such grants in order to show a budget cut.

Another "foot-in-the-door" device for mortgaging Uncle Sam's tax-fed income is the growing practice of launching new public works projects with small down payments. The 1951 budget recommends a variety of new public works which would require down payments totaling $158,100,000. In later years, however, these would result in additional expenditures of $319,800,000. Largest of these programs, the Lawrence Seaway project, calls for an initial deposit of only $1,000,000 in 1951 but at least $300,000,000 more to give Uncle Sam a clear title.

Federal grants-in-aid to states are along the same line. The proposed Federal-aid-to-education bill is an illustration. First year's installment on that would be $280,000,000. But advocates admit they want to it up as high as $2,000,000,000 year eventually.

Already a large part of the Federal budget is going to meet expenditures authorized in earlier budgets. Of the $42,400,000,000 budget proposed for 1951 about $1,000,000,000 or 2 per cent will be obligations incurred in 1951.
